"I came to the conclusion by the time I left Guantanamo that we're making a drastic mistake here, and what I saw as a whole was inconsistent with who we are and the values we represent as a nation."

- Former US Army Sergeant Erik Saar, who served as a translator and interrogator at Guantanamo

"Guantanamo: Honor Bound to Defend Freedom" was created by Victoria Brittain & Gillian Slovo from spoken and written testimony relating to the US-run detention camp at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. The play opened in London, and moved to New York City last summer. It focuses on the stories of five British detainees, and asks how much damage is being done to democratic values through the "war on terrorism." The community readings in Boston and Cambridge will be followed by a discussion of the issues.

"All the first person narratives in this evening of documentary theater are devastating...it leaves you in no doubt that travesties are underway in the barbed camps of Guantanamo." Washington Post.
