

BANNED BOOKS WEEK 2011

Concerned readers can help Amnesty International assist writers, editors, publishers, librarians and others who suffer human rights abuses because of their work.

Amnesty International focuses impartially worldwide on preventing and ending grave abuses of the rights to physical & mental integrity, freedom of conscience & expression, and freedom from discrimination, while promoting all human rights.

Universal Declaration of Human Rights

Article 19: Everyone has the right to freedom of opinion and expression; this right includes freedom to hold opinions without interference and to seek, receive, and impart information and ideas through any media and regardless of frontiers.

Dear Ambassador Sarukhan,

I am concerned about the safety of writer and human rights defender Lydia Cacho following new death threats that she has received in the summer of 2011. Please advise your government to provide her with effective protection — in accordance with her wishes, and as ordered by the Inter-American Human Rights Commission.

It is important for public security that Mexican authorities carry out a swift, full and impartial investigation into the anonymous threats, and that those responsible for the threats and intimidation against Lydia Cacho be brought to justice.

Thank you for assistance with this important matter.

Sincerely,
