Dear Mr. Owens:

I am writing to follow up on my recent letter about your state's use of Nembutal[®] (pentobarbital sodium injection, USP) for the purpose of lethal injection in your state.

The use of pentobarbital outside of the approved labeling has not been established. As such, Lundbeck cannot assure the associated safety and efficacy profiles in such instances. For this reason, we are concerned about its use in prison executions.

We ask that you stop using pentobarbital in the execution of prisoners in your state because it contradicts everything we are in business to do – provide therapies that improve people's lives.

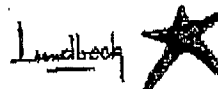

Thank you for your serious consideration of this matter.

Sincerely,

Staffan Schüberg

Dear Mr. Owens,

In the wake of the decision by Hospira to cease production of sodium thiopental, which is used in the execution of prisoners, Lundbeck has become aware that the State of Georgia is now considering use of Lundbeck's product Nembutal[®] (pentobarbital sodium injection, USP) for this purpose. Lundbeck is adamantly opposed to the use of Nembutal, or any product for that matter, for the purpose of capital punishment.

We recognize that we cannot control how licensed health care professionals use this or any pharmaceutical product. Nevertheless, we urge you to refrain from using Nembutal in the execution of prisoners in your state because it contradicts everything we are in business to do – provide therapies that improve people's lives.

Thank you for your serious consideration of this matter.

Sincerely,

Staffan Schtberg
