KACHIN PASTOR SENTENCED TO FOUR YEARS IN PRISON

Kachin pastors Dundaw Nawng Lat and Langjaw Gam Seng have been sentenced to two years and three months imprisonment and Dundaw Nawng Lat to an additional two years in prison under charges which Amnesty International believes are politically motivated.

Dundaw Nawng Lat and Langjaw Gam Seng's appeal hearing began on 4 December 2017 in Lashio Township, northern Shan State. On 27 October, both men were found guilty of supporting the Kachin Independence Organisation (KIA), under Article 17(1) of the 1908 Unlawful Association Act, and for having an unlicensed motorbike under Article 8 of the 2012 Import and Export Law, and sentenced to two years and three months imprisonment. The charges relate to the role that the two pastors played in organizing a visit by journalists to Monekoe town, northern Shan state, in November 2016 to show the destruction allegedly caused by Myanmar Army airstrikes.

Dumdaw Nawng Lat was sentenced to an additional two years in prison for "defamation" under Section 500 of Myanmar's Penal Code following a newspaper interview where he discussed the alleged airstrikes. Amnesty International believes that these charges are politically motivated and linked to their role in reporting alleged human rights abuses by the Myanmar military.

The two pastors were arrested on 24 December 2016 and charged in January 2017, after being detained for almost a month in military custody, without charge or any access to their lawyers and family. The men are currently being held in Lashio Prison.

1) TAKE ACTION

Write a letter, send an email, call, fax or tweet:

- Drop all politically motivated charges against Dundaw Nawng Lat and Langjaw Gam Seng;
- Ensure that, during their detention, Dundaw Nawng Lat and Langjaw Gam Seng are not tortured or otherwise ill-treated, are held in humane conditions and have access to lawyers, family and adequate medical care; and
- Repeal or amend all laws, including the 1908 Unlawful Association Act and Section 500 of Myanmar's Penal Code, which impose arbitrary or sweeping restrictions on the human right to freedom of expression, in line with international human rights law and standards.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

The armed conflict between armed ethnic groups and the Myanmar Army in Kachin and northern Shan states has entered its seventh year. Fighting seriously intensified in November 2016 when the Brotherhood of the Northern Alliance, a new coalition of four armed ethnic groups in northern Myanmar, launched coordinated attacks on security outposts. In a report released in June 2017, Amnesty International documented human rights violations committed by the Myanmar Army in late November 2016 in Monekoe town where the Army arbitrarily detained dozens of civilians from ethnic minorities and then used them as human shields along the inner perimeter of a hilltop base there; several were killed and others seriously wounded by gun and grenade fire. See "All the Civilian Suffer": Conflict, Displacement and Abuse in Northern Myanmar (Index: ASA 16/6429/2017, <https://www.amnesty.org/en/documents/asa16/6429/2017/en/>)

The Myanmar authorities continue to arrest and imprison individuals solely for the peaceful exercise of their right to freedom of expression. The right to freedom of expression is enshrined in Article 19 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR). There are numerous repressive laws in Myanmar which impose arbitrary and sweeping restrictions on the right to freedom of expression, including the 1908 Unlawful Associations Act and Article 500 of Myanmar's Penal Code. These laws leave human rights defenders, peaceful activists, journalists and ordinary members of the public at risk of arrest and imprisonment for their peaceful activities.

Amnesty International continues to receive reports about poor prison conditions in Myanmar, which do not comply with those set out in the UN Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners. These concerns include a lack of access to adequate medical treatment, clean drinking water, nutritious food and water for bathing.
