Dear Mr. Gvarakidze,

I am writing to express grave concern regarding the allegations of torture and other ill-treatment of activist Saba Skhvitaridze, who was arrested on December 5, 2024, after participating in an anti-government protest. He was beaten by police officers and denied access to legal counsel and medical care.

Saba reported that, while in custody, he was threatened with rape and forced to sign a “confession” stating he assaulted a police officer. When he refused, masked officers beat him violently, striking his head and ribs continuously for about 10 minutes, causing him to intermittently lose consciousness. Police officers then mocked and ignored his plea for access to a lawyer and medical assistance despite him having injuries that caused him severe pain and nausea.

Despite the visible injuries that Saba displayed at the pre-trial hearing the following day, the prosecution refused to initiate an investigation into his allegations of torture and other ill-treatment. The authorities only initiated an investigation days later after an independent medical examination confirmed that his injuries were consistent with torture. Nevertheless, the judge ordered him to be remanded in detention pending trial without providing any justification.

Saba Skhvitaridze remains held at a high security prison, facing a sentence of up to eleven years while his allegations of torture and other ill-treatment have not been effectively investigated.

I urge you to ensure an effective investigation into the allegations of torture and other ill-treatment of Saba Skhvitaridze and to bring all those responsible to justice in fair trials. I also call on you to ensure that Saba is tried in accordance with international standards for a fair trial, and to ensure that any statements or other evidence obtained as a result of torture or other ill treatment is excluded in all proceedings except those brought against suspected perpetrators of such abuse.

Yours sincerely,

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Saba Skhvitardze, an activist and a member of the opposition political party, Akhali, has been publicly critical of the government and actively involved in anti-government and pro-European protests in Georgia since 2024. Saba Skhvitardze was arrested on the night of December 5, 2024, after attending an opposition party meeting. He is being accused of assaulting a police officer with a baton, causing head injuries. The incident reportedly occurred as a group of masked individuals confronted activists and politicians following their meeting. One of the masked men slapped a woman activist after she attempted to remove his hood to identify him. Clashes ensued as Saba Skhvitardze and other activists intervened to restrain and confront the masked man, who was later identified as a police officer. The police made no arrests during the confrontation but arrested Saba Skhvitardze the following day.

Saba Skhvitardze's arrest and subsequent treatment appears to be retaliatory, aimed at punishing him for participating in protests and creating a wider chilling effect to deter others from joining the protests. Saba was reportedly stopped without an arrest warrant, denied an explanation for his arrest, and his whereabouts were concealed for over five hours. Police officers confiscated the phones of Saba and his father, effectively preventing documentation of the arrest and obstructing access to legal representation.

While in custody, Saba was beaten and threatened for having allegedly assaulted a police officer. He was pressured to sign a "confession" and denied access to medical care despite his injuries and severe pain. A forensic report confirmed that his injuries were consistent with torture, but his formal recognition by the authorities as a victim of torture has been delayed and there has been no progress into the investigation of his allegations of torture and other ill-treatment after more than six months.

His trial has also been marred by serious violations of safeguards for a fair trial: despite presenting visible injuries and a detailed account of torture and other ill-treatment at his initial court appearance. The judge disregarded these claims and ordered his pre-trial detention following a summary hearing without duly assessing the risks or deliberating on proportionality, necessity, or alternative measures. The court also excluded the presence of journalists and members of the public before delivering its decision. The court also failed to address significant inconsistencies in the prosecution, including in witness statements, police protocols, and medical reports. Saba's defense has also complained about their inability to properly cross-examine law enforcement witnesses who have repeatedly evaded questions in an attempt to undermine the defense's ability to challenge the evidence.

While Saba remains in prison and faces criminal prosecution for allegedly inflicting injuries to a police officer, no law enforcement officials have been identified, investigated, or held accountable for the allegations of torture and other ill-treatment. His case reflects a broader pattern of abusing the criminal justice system in Georgia, where law enforcement officers accused of using force unlawfully enjoy impunity while protesters are tortured, prosecuted, and detained in unfair trials.
